LITEFOOT lies bleeding at his feet.

Within the porch there is an aspidistra in a large pot and a wicker basket labelled "Linehouse Laundry".

CHANG is in a position of intense concentration. But now he hears something and swings round. The crunch of feet on gravel. CHANG stoops and takes the heavy revolver from LITEFOOT'S limp hand.

THE DOCTOR, whistling softly to himself, is crunching up the drive towards the house.

CHANG crouches and prepares to aim.

LEELA: He went out. He said he'd seen a Chinaman outside the window.

THE DOCTOR nods, absorbing
this information.

THE DOCTOR: And you jumped through it?

LEELA: Something like that.

He rises silently and ghosts away.

THE DOCTOR: Stay here.

THE DOCTOR is climbing into the house through a back window.

LEELA is still crouched, waiting for a sound in the darkness. It comes suddenly. A rush of wheels up the drive. LEELA straightens, staring as the shadowy, unlighted hansom rounds the bend and slows along the front of the house. CHANG flings open the door and scrambles in as the CHINESE DRIVER cracks his whip and the hansom speeds off down the other arc of the driveway.

LEELA is running. She hits the back step and pulls herself up as the hansom careers away.

THE DOCTOR, too late, comes running from the porch, a makeshift club in his hand. The cab has been swallowed into the night, the drum of hooves and rumble of wheels retreating into the distance.

THE DOCTOR turns back and bends over LITEFOOT who is slowly coming round.

He steps into the garden.

He stares around, only now realising she has gone.
